"Needed Room For Lover," New York Police Told After Brutal Murder

NEW YORK, May 18 — (UP) — Mrs. Helen Tiernan, 25-year-old blonde, petite widow, may have attempted for months to dispose of her two blue-eyed children so that she could live alone with the man she loved, it was intimated today.

While police charged Mrs. Helen Tiernan, and her lover, George Christodoulus, with the murder of Mrs. Tiernan's blue-eyed seven year old daughter, Helen, Owen Connelly, her neighbor, told police that Helen and her brother, Jimmy, 4, had almost died from gas 10 months ago when it appeared then to be an accident.

Jimmy left to die. Jimmy also had been an intended victim of a child massacre in the woods near Brookhaven, Long Island, Saturday morning, but had survived the clubbing, knifing and fire that killed his sister. His baby prattle led to the arrest of his mother. For hours she tried desperately to protect the man she loved, but early today she confessed that the Greek restaurant worker who calls himself George Christie, had helped her kill her daughter.

Connelly insisted that Mrs. Tiernan was a "good woman." Ten months ago he passed through the corridor outside Mrs. Tiernan's apartment and smelled gas. He broke in and found the children almost dead. Mrs. Tiernan explained that she had gone out, leaving a pot on the stove. It had boiled over, she said, putting out the flame. Connelly still believed

Van Devanter, High Court Justice, To Retire June 2

BRIEF MESSAGE SENT TO F. D. BY NEW DEAL FOE

Dean of Conservatives, 78, Discloses Intention As Senate Vote Nears

BULLETIN
WASHINGTON, May 18. — (UP)—Retirement of the conservative justice, Willis Van Devanter, from the supreme court today brought immediate repercussions in President Roosevelt's judiciary fight. The senate judiciary committee approved an adverse report to the senate on the court enlargement program.

The judiciary committee vote and the Van Devanter retirement heightened strong congressional indications that Roosevelt's program is headed for compromise revision or outright defeat.

Senator Borah, who announced the vote, said the committee also voted to reject all compromise amendments.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—(UP)—Justice Willis Van Devanter, dean of the supreme court conservatives who have voted almost invariably against President Roosevelt's New Deal legislation, today announced his retirement from the supreme bench.

The announcement of the venerable jurist's intentions was made known in a brief note to President Roosevelt. Van Devanter, who celebrated his 78th birthday April 17, will quit the high court post he has occupied since Jan. 3, 1911 on June 2—the day following the supreme court's final session of this term. Announcement of Van Devanter's retirement—a factor of vital effect in President Roosevelt's drive for enactment of his supreme court enlargement plan—came on the very day the senate judiciary committee was scheduled to meet to take a final vote on the court plan.

Court Quits June 1
Only yesterday the supreme court announced that it would quit for the year on June 1. Van Devanter apparently had been waiting only for the final decision on a court adjournment date in order to announce that he was quitting his court position.

COLUMBUS, May 18.—(UP)—Married men of Cleveland will not be forced to "stay and friend" when in trouble if an organization which filed papers of incorporation with the Secretary of State here today proves successful.

The title of the new "protective" group is Cleveland's Doghouse Club, Inc.

The incorporation papers stated the Club was to be a "social, charitable and fraternal organization," and said its purpose was to "establish and maintain clubrooms to shelter married men when domestic and civil fury makes it necessary for them to seek refuge away from home."

The incorporators were Sol Laurie, M. H. Griffith and Charles W. Smith, all of Cleveland.

DUKE AND WALLY TO WED JUNE 3 IN CANDE CASTLE

No Member of Royal British Family to Attend Ceremony For Former King

MONTS, France, May 18.—(UP)—The Duke of Windsor, who gave up his throne for Mrs. Wallis Warfield, will marry her here on June 3 with no member of the British royal family present, Herman L. Rogers announced at the Chateau De Cande today on behalf of the former king.

The announcement was published in an official communique from the duke himself, and delivered to some 180 reporters who waited outside the chateau.

It settled at long last the dispute over whether the duke's brothers and sisters, or any member of the royal family, would be present, thus lending official sanction to the marriage.

Notice Disclosed

The communique said: "His royal highness the Duke of Windsor announces that his marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Teakle Wallis Warfield of Maryland, will take place at the Chateau at Monts on June 3.

The communique revealed that only those who have been with the duke and Mrs. Warfield since last November will attend.

"Invitations to the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield will be confined to those who have been with them in the past months," the communique said. "No member of the royal family will be present."

The communique referred to the bride-to-be as Mrs. Wallis Warfield throughout.

The announcement that no member of the royal family would attend meant that the family's official blessing on the wedding, despite their affection for the duke, is being withheld.

Frank W. Turner, of Delaware, engineer of Division 6 of the state highway department, informed The Herald Tuesday that improvement of Route 22, west of the Scioto river bridge, is still a "live" issue despite the fact it was not included in a list of projects announced last week.

"No projects were put in that group except those definitely approved," Mr. Turner said.

"However," he declared, "the state is ready to start work at once if the government approves your Route 22 project as a flood relief job."

He estimated the project would cost between $300,000 and $500,000, the state and federal government dividing the expense.

CONFESSION BRINGS FIVE-YEAR DECREE

Attempted Extortion of Jemima Dungan to Cost Neighbor His Freedom

UNDERWOOD ON BENCH

Mill Street Man May Go To Narcotics Farm

William W. Madden, 58, was sentenced to serve five years in a federal prison, Tuesday, by U. S. Judge Mell G. Underwood on a charge of attempting to extort $1,500 from Miss Jemima Dungan, his E. Mill street neighbor.

Madden changed his plea to guilty when his case was called in federal court in Columbus Tuesday morning. He had previously denied the charges.

Madden told Judge Underwood he had been a narcotic user for 15 years, since he lost his left leg in an accident. Underwood said he would grant Madden leniency because of his physical condition.

Madden testified he did not know what he was doing because of the narcotics. He said he did not recall writing the note or any of the subsequent developments.

"I didn't know what I was doing when I was under the influence of the drug," he said. "My wife told me following a party at which there were a lot of ladies present that I dressed and undressed 15 or 20 times before the women."

Davis said the drug had such a grip on Madden that during the flood the defendant hired a boat to "get a shot of morphine" from his doctor who had been assigned to National Guard duty in another city.

High Penalty Provided

The penalty provided under the law includes from one to 20 years in prison and a fine as high as $5,000. Madden was not fined. Under federal law, Madden can have much time cut off for good behavior.

It is believed probable that Madden will be confined in the federal narcotic farm near Louisville, Ky. However, the assignment will be made by Attorney General Cummings in Washington, D. C., all federal cases going through his office.

Madden was accompanied to the U. S. court by his attorney, Ray W. Davis.

Madden was arrested Tuesday, Feb. 16, by federal postal authorities when he picked up a "dummy" package of money tossed along Route 22, at the first curve west of the river bridge. The package was thrown from a taxicab by Miss Dungan in compliance with the terms of a letter she had received.

The first letter was received by Miss Dungan on Feb. 16. It instructed her to put $1,500 in $5, $10 and $20 bills in a can and place it in her yard along an alley fence. She was to hang a rag on the fence to designate the spot where the can was located. The money was to be ready between Feb. 6 and 28.

WASHINGTON C. H., May 18.—John Maxwell, 51, prominent Jefferson township farmer, died in Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, Monday, the result of a rat bite eight months ago. The wound had caused what is known as "rat fever."

He took ordinary precautions against infection, and the wound seemed to be healing. Then his hand and arm became swollen. After weeks of suffering, he seemed to be recovering from the disease. Three weeks ago the swelling returned and he was removed to the hospital.

DAVEY TO OUST "UNNECESSARY" STATE WORKERS

"Quite a Few" Dismissals Expected in Next Six Months' Time

MONEY BILL DRAFTED

All Departments Combed For Reductions

COLUMBUS, May 18.—(UP)—Governor Martin L. Davey today began a drive to cut "inefficient and unnecessary" employees from state payrolls, and promised "quite a few" dismissals within six months.

"We have been combing all departments for possible reductions," he said. "We have set out on a serious program of economy, and we feel that now is the time to take action since jobs are plentiful."

The governor indicated that he will oppose any efforts of senate insurgents to whittle possible savings from his general appropriations bill, to be considered by a special session of the legislature in June.

"The members of the senate who attempted to cut from the appropriations bill didn't know what they were doing," he said.

The governor said that a new appropriations bill being prepared by the finance director would be practically the same as that killed by the senate insurgent group in the recent regular session.

This bill provided for state expenditures of approximately $89,000,000 for the next two years. Anti-administration forces claimed that it actually provided for expenditures of $93,000,000 because of an "error" in the method of listing expenditures of the state tax commission.

Insurgents turned down this proposal, drafted one of their own, lumping all state appropriations, including those for old age pensions and liquor into one bill. After amendments were made on the floor, this program represented a total saving of approximately $14,000,000.

Referring to the $14,000,000 savings by the insurgent action, the governor said they were "paper savings" and "many of them cruel and unjustified."

The Ashville-Harrison board of education met in regular session Monday evening and transacted the regular business of paying bills, etc. All the teachers were reemployed for the year 1937-38 except Mr. Spence, the English teacher, who had presented a written request that he not be considered an applicant.

The schedule for next year has already been made out and, when Mr. Spence's successor has been selected, the high school will be all set to reopen for 1937-38. Harry Margulis, mayor of the village, appeared before the board in behalf of the council regarding the improvements which have recently been made at the village park. His suggestion that the board pay for the improvements, since they were made for the school students mainly, were taken under advisement but no definite conclusion reached.

Ashville—May, 1888, Snow Recalled
Yes, it did hail Sunday and many that I met Monday told me about it. And along with this they asked me if I remembered so and so about that time when it did or didn't. Bill Abbott told me about the 8th of May snow in 1888, when many tree limbs were broken down by its weight. The early gardens were not injured. Asked him about that good sweet corn he always raises for all of us and he replied that it was "not doing so well, too cold and wet," he said.

Ashville—Rayman Recalled
Walter Rayman told me this morning that he had just returned from Cleveland where he had visited with his only living brother, Elmer, who is 77 years of age and in poor health. It will be remembered by our older readers that Elmer was the first or among the first teachers in Madison high school, then located at St. Paul.

work it did Sunday the verdict would be decidedly in its favor. Ashville won from the Columbus team in a 6 to 0 score. Hollenback was on the mound for first seven innings and Sark two. Sheldon was the back stop. The visitors were given but one hit. The second game also with a Columbus team, was called at the end of four and one-half innings on account of rain. The score was then 2 to 0 favoring Ashville. The Springfield Giants are slated for next Sunday.

Ashville—Many Incidents Recalled
Jacob Glick, Walnut township, is one of the "old war horses" yet sticking around, not old, but has lived a good while. Is active, does anything he takes a notion he wants to do, drives his auto anywhere and can tell about many things that happened years and years ago when he was a young man.

Back in the early eighties he and his brother Alfred, now deceased, conducted a livery and feed stable here in Ashville where the Don and Bill garage now is.

He hauled bricks for now Plum's hall and the first school house and did the hauling for old Walnut township election house. He and his family have lived on the 240-acre Huber farm near what is known as Nebraska, for more than twenty-six years and "a lot of things have happened in that time that no one ever thought could," he said.

"50 PLUS" "30 MINUS"

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is one of the few radio personalities

who do not use radio's "sign language," the production man's tell-tale system of signaling the stars that they are running ahead or behind time.

Mrs. Roosevelt has learned a few of the signals, although not deliberately, but has found it necessary to use them. During the breaks in her program production men write notes and lay them before her. These notes explain that she is 45 seconds ahead, 20 seconds behind, with a cryptic "50 plus" or "20 minus."

She regulates the speed of her voice accordingly.

The first two broadcasts of her Wednesday chats over the NBC blue network at 6:15 p. m. went off exactly as timed in rehearsal and no signals at all were necessary. On the third, however, she picked up 50 seconds before Virginia Barr read the commercial announcement.

TRIO ARRESTED AS SUSPECTS IN BOMBING SERIES

One Man Confesses, Fort Wayne, Ind. Authorities Tell New York

ALL SOUGHT IN EAST

Labor Trouble Cited For Gotham Blastings

FORT WAYNE, Ind., May 18.—(UP)—Three men described as ring-leaders of a nation-wide bombing ring were hauled into city court today for hearing on fugitive warrants preliminary to their removal to New York.

New York investigators who arrested them here in Kokomo, Ind., said one of them confessed the Brooklyn theatre bombing for which they were indicted, and implicated the other two.

"I have definite evidence that these men were involved in coercive activities throughout the southwest as well," said Lieutenant James Pike of the New York City bomb squad.

In Brooklyn, District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan described the men as "the brains behind the throwing of stench bombs and other offensive matter in motion picture theatres not only in Brooklyn and all of greater New York, but also throughout the country."

Labor Trouble Blamed

The bombing of Brooklyn's Star theatre, in November, 1936, on which the indictments were based, was attributed to labor trouble between rival unions of motion picture projection room operators.

One of the prisoners, Charles C. (Eddie) Smith, 38, Fort Wayne, is secretary-treasurer of Fort Wayne's Motion Picture Operators Alliance.

Charles Smith was arrested at his home with Leo K. (Izzie) Smith, 48, Fred C. Blacker, 50, was arrested in his home in Kokomo, Ind. The three had been named in fugitive warrants issued in Kings county, New York. They were placed in Allen county jail, under bonds of $10,000 each.

Charles Donovan, 39, found with Blacker in the latter's home, was held for investigation under $2,000 bond.

Papers Discovered

Principal evidence against Donovan were papers which officers said they found in his pocket. Pike said the papers contained formulae for chemical bombs.

Leo Smith confessed taking part in the Star theatre bombing, Pike said, and named Charles Smith and Blacker as his confederates.

All four signed waivers of extradition.

GAINES, 19, PUT ON PAROLE FOR NEXT TWO YEARS

Floyd Gaines, 19, of Columbus, formerly of Circleville, was placed under probation for two years Monday by Judge J. W. Adkins on a burglary and larceny charge.

Gaines was indicted with Woodrow Caldwell, 21, of Circleville, R. F. D., in connection with the theft of about $5 from the Shelby & McCrady lunch room last Feb. 6. Caldwell was recently placed under a similar probation.

ARKANSAS GETS YOUNG SLAYER

Three States File Papers For Brockhurst; Girl To Face Charges

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 18.—(UP)—Lester Brockhurst, 23, itinerant slayer, and his 18-year-old sweetheart, Bernice Felton, left for Little Rock, Ark., in custody early today to face a first degree murder charge.

The girl's father, Abraham Felton, left with Illinois officials for his home in Rockford, Ill. He told Brockhurst that he was sorry "you're not going to Illinois." He had been the youth's guardian under a parole that freed him from an Illinois reformatory.

Brockhurst was disappointed bitterly in the decision of Governor Herbert H. Lehman to give him to Arkansas authorities instead of those of Illinois or Texas who also want him for murder. He believes he will be executed and wanted to see his mother before he dies.

Governor Lehman ruled that Arkansas had a stronger case against them than Illinois and Texas, which issued murder warrants only for Brockhurst. The youth was said by police to have confessed homicides in each of the three states during a three-month joyride of crime, which began in Rockford with the slaying of Albin Theander, a tailor.

It was at the insistence of Texas authorities, who charged Brockhurst with the murder of Jack Griffith, Fort Worth tavern keeper, that the contest was decided by the governor.

Prosecutor P. Milton, of Lonoke county, Ark., explained that his state had issued murder warrants for both Brockhurst and Miss Felton in connection with the slaying of Victor Gates, plantation owner. He argued that it would be unfair to send them to Texas or Illinois, where the girl would be freed.

The subject of this sketch William Franklin Rudisill, son of Henry and Eliza Kraft Rudisill, was born in Banton Ridge, Ohio July 12, 1861. He was one of a family of twelve children. Four sisters and one brother have preceded him in death. He was twice married, the first to Alice Aund of Findley, Ohio to this union one son, Francis was born. Both son and daughter having preceded him in death. Modie on June 18, 1911 and Francis on May 9, 1912.

At an early age he was converted to the Christian religion and united with the United Brethren church. He and his companion devoted much of their time and means to the support of Otterbein College and Otterbein Home and the Church world in general until his home going.

After an illness of near seven years, during which time he was very patient and never heard to complain. All that medical skill and the hands of a loving wife, of whom it could be said, "She did him good all the days of his life," were done, he departed this life May 12, 1:50 p. m. 1937 at the of 75 years and 10 months.

He leaves to mourn their loss, his devoted wife, three sisters and three brothers, namely, Mrs. Ada L. Pfingst, Syracuse, Ind.; Mrs. Jennie Huntwork, Lansing, Mich.; Mrs. Augustus Hubarger, Ashland County; Archie Rudisill, McComb, Ohio; Perry Rudisill, Cleveland, Ohio; Sherman Rudisill, Circleville, Ohio; one grandchild other relatives and friends.

MRS. RUDISILL.

There's a home in the skies,
Where the weary will rest,
A glorious home in the "Land

There tears will be wiped
From the sorrowful eye.
And the broken in heart will

There is a land where beauty cannot fade,
Nor sorrow dim the eye;
Where true love shall not droop,

And none shall ever die.

VISIONS THAT FADED

THE War Department discloses that at least 55,000,000 trained soldiers can "spring to arms overnight" in 48 nations, and that the standing armies of the world now total 6,500,000 men.

Writing of Europe in the current Atlantic, an American observer of obvious competence describes the quiet exodus from more than one capital to rural areas remote from possible air attacks, the construction of bomb-proof cellars and subterranean airports, the mining of frontier roads, the imbedding of steel rails in the soil to impede the progress of tanks and trucks.

The terrific excess profits tax in Chancellor Chamberlain's new budget has shocked financial London, and not all his eulogizing of "the golden shower" of the British rearmament program can disguise the fact that the national energies are being diverted from useful and productive enterprise.

The League of Nations is disestablished. Europe is falling back on a series of regional pacts and diplomatic realignments, of which the development of the "Berlin-Rome axis" is of great current significance. Peace, where peace lies within the intention of governments, depends upon individual effort. The London Times points out, as the wolf demonstrated on the lamb, that two are not needed to make a quarrel, but that it takes two to compose one.

The smaller states in Central and South-eastern Europe, multiplied in number since the frontier-drawing of 1919, are under beguilement and pressure to join one armed camp or another. Except in The Netherlands and Scandinavia budgets are unbalanced, and even Great Britain, in her race to build ships and planes, is borrowing against the future. The United States, which ranks tenth as concerns the standing armies of the world and nineteenth in potential trained reserves, is spending close to $1,000,000,000 per annum on preparations for war. Even Switzerland, which has 309 men under arms, can call up 600,000 reserves.

This is the situation in the Spring of 1937, almost two decades after the statesmen of the world saw visions of permanent peace in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles.

The average embezzler gets away with $6,278 before he is caught, a bonding company avers, which just about covers attorneys' fees.

Oswald Garrison Villard thinks that the boys who do the fighting should get a chance to vote for or against war. All they get now is a chance, if lucky, to collect on hospitalization, pensions and bonuses.

World At A Glance

The Queen's Work, national Catholic magazine, published in St. Louis, which recently undertook a poll of the congressional press gallery members relative to 1940's Democratic presidential possibilities, will contain in its May issue the completed result of its investigation.

It is interesting. The Queen's Work's system of scoring is complicated, making it difficult to determine the correspondents' estimates of the various candidacies in their order of probability. However, the list (of 23) is available.

To begin, two more correspondents mention Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania as a possibility than there are who mention any other candidate. Next in line is President Roosevelt.

On the opposite hand, of those who mention the president a larger proportion are pretty sure of him than there are who mention the governor.

F. D. R. FIRST CHOICE

That is to say, the president is the premier selection of the great majority of those who mention him; Earle is more largely a second or third guess of those by whom he is mentioned.

The Queen's Work, on this basis, reckons the advantage slightly with the president.

"Mentions" of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace are only a single point below "mentions" of President Roosevelt. Washington gossip has it that Wallace is the president's preference to succeed him, unless he himself is drafted for renomination. The Queen's Work, however, does not mention this.

As to "mentions," former Gov. Paul V. McNutt of Indiana, now high commissioner to the Philippines, is just behind Wallace, and Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan is just behind the Hoosier.

Then comes John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers and C. I. O.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull is seventh on the list. Although I have the highest personal and political regard for him, I wouldn't consider him even a remote presidential likelihood; he will be nearly 70 in 1940, for one thing.

After Hull, Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri.

OTHERS

Following Clark there is quite a slump in the number of "mentions." Senator Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin. Jesse Jones of RFC and Relief Director Harry L. Hopkins are approximately tied.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

PRESIDENT "TOUGH AND SORE"

WASHINGTON—The President minced no words when he conferred with the congressional leaders following his return from Texas. He was blunt and full of fight. One of the conferees described him as "tough and sore."

"There will be no compromise on the court issue now or later," the President told the Democratic chieftains. "And that goes for relief too. I am standing pat on both issues."

Roosevelt expressed the firm conviction that the Administration can win on both measures, and he made it clear that he expected the leaders to back him 100 percent. In return, he assured them of militant support.

Of the four leaders who consulted with the President only one, Vice President Jack Garner, urged a conciliatory attitude.

The Texan, who has become increasingly restless over the prospect of spending the summer in Washington, away from his spacious farm veranda and lazy fishing expeditions, advised compromising on the court bill with a two-judge deal and accepting a cut in the relief budget. He told the President such a program could be put through the Senate with dispatch and by a large vote. Roosevelt's answer was "nothing doing."

The other three conferees, Senate Leader Joe Robinson, Speaker Bankhead and House Leader Sam Rayburn, advocated a finish fight.

Robinson said the votes to carry the court bill in the Senate were to be had if a sufficiently vigorous effort was made to get them. Bankhead and Rayburn declared flatly the relief appropriation would go through the House without a cut. They also promised that if the Senate passed the court measure it would be approved by their chamber.

FARLEY'S ADVICE

Postmaster General Jim Farley had a hand in the President's decision to stand pat and fight. Big Jim accompanied him part of the way home and told Roosevelt that the Administration could not afford either to back down or be licked.

"There is more to this fight than just the fate of the court bill," Farley said. "What the leaders of the opposition really are aiming at is 1940. They are out to wrest control of the party from the Administration so they can put over a reactionary as the next presidential candidate."

"If we are licked on the court bill we are pretty nearly washed up. We can't compromise, and we can't afford to lose. The votes can be got if we go after them hard enough."

WIZARDRY

It will take all the President's vaunted political wizardry to win on the Supreme Court issue.

Right now his six-justice proposal is as dead as a dodo. The Administration is certain of only 46 Senate votes, three short of the majority necessary to put it through. Two months ago the White House could have mustered not less than 52 if there had been a showdown.

Critic observes that Europe has restored the old balance of power. The one that brought permanent peace—except for the World War.

DIET AND HEALTH

Theories of Food Faddists Scored

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"IF THE DEDUCTIONS of many food faddists accepted as facts, were really operative, it would be difficult to explain how the human race has survived," says a bulletin from the department of agriculture.

Dr. Clendening

I am told that the book on the "Hay Diet" is one of the best sellers in England, so the United States is not alone in its fondness for food fads, but more food notions flourish in the United States than in any other civilized country. It is very easy to gull a public which remains profoundly ignorant of the most elementary facts of the science of nutrition. With a little smattering of physiology and chemistry, the food enthusiast can twist things to suit his purpose and create a system which thousands of people will follow blindly. Certain commercial manufacturers of vitamins are not entirely without blame in creating this atmosphere.

Food fads probably do less harm than drug fads, but sometimes by badly balanced diets they can create states of malnutrition. The greatest single bugaboo of the food faddist is meat. Upon meat has been heaped the blame for almost all the diseases of mankind.

Quite as silly as the no-meat fad itself is the scheme for separating starches and proteins—that is, vegetables and meats—and eating one class at separate meals. The digestive system is perfectly capable of taking care of both kinds of food at the same time. Nearly any kind of meat is digestible. The prejudice, for instance, against pork, on the grounds of digestibility, has been scouted by Ralph Hoagland, biochemist of the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture.

Meats Digestible

Meats, he says, are among the most digestible of human food products. Pork compares favorably with other meats in this quality. In comparative tests pork was digested in the stomach slightly more rapidly than turkey, in the same time as chicken, and slightly more slowly than beef or lamb.

Meats are esteemed in some places for reducing purposes. One of the most eminent nutritional authorities in the United States, Dr. E. V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins university, includes lean beef, lean ham, hamburger steak, and even a bit of bacon in his list of recommendations for reducing menus.

Some pseudo-scientific diet experts claim to be able to dissolve and expel gallstones by correct food and without operation. Another promises patients a cure for tuberculosis within 48 hours by diet. The cruelest of all is the man who assures patients that he can get rid of cancer by removing impurities through fasting. As a matter of fact, fasting is likely to increase the amount of poisons in the body, because when the body does not get food it burns up its own fatty tissue and the result is acidosis. No one has ever been cured by too prolonged fasting, since this impairs vitality, and every tissue cell must have food to keep up its own vitality.

I have expressed the above opinions many times, but it so happens that these are not my own, but are abstracted from an article by A. C. Hansen, M. D.

CHAPTER 53

"YOU SAY the $1,500,000 was to go to mother only if I weren't alive?" Jacqueline asked Charles. "Yes, of course." She was thoughtful for a few moments, and then went on. "As soon as I saw that copy of the will I understood everything—the pretty plot to get me to sign it all away and marry Jim Asson. I never could understand why Colonel Lutman was so desperately anxious for the marriage to come off, but I understood then. I suppose he was to have a share in the spoils?"

"Yes. And so was I, Jacqueline." She took no notice of that confession. "And that's why," she continued, "when I turned Jim Asson down, the Colonel so suddenly fell in love with me. He did, you know, Charles. He even asked me to marry him."

"Lutman's a swine," said the lawyer tersely. "He doesn't make love very nicely, if that's what you mean. He . . . She made a quick gesture. "And then I telephoned to you, Charles. You asked me to call at your flat, and on my way somebody put me out—with chloroform or something—and when I woke up I was on a barge on the river with some people called Joplin."

Charles nodded. "You don't seem a bit surprised, Charles."

"I'm not." "I couldn't at first understand why Colonel Lutman had done it," she went on. "Kidnaping is a pretty risky game, and it struck me that to make it worth while he must have something really big in view. And then I suddenly realized. I remembered what the will said—that if I wasn't alive the money of animal industry of the department of agriculture. I thought I saw Lutman's game. I wouldn't marry Jim, and I wouldn't marry Lutman, and his only chance of laying hands on the money was to get rid of me and marry mother. I was certain that was what he had in mind."

"And so it was, Charles. I got away from the barge—jumped for it and swam. There was a dreadful current and I thought I was done for; and then Lutman came along in his boat and I clung on and tried to get on board. But when he saw who it was he kicked my hands off the side and started up the engine and went off."

"Jacqueline! The swine! My God! If I ever get my hands on Lutman's throat . . ."

"Don't get excited, Charles. The police found me floating about and fished me out. As soon as they'd let me go from the hospital I dashed home. Lutman was there. He had just asked mother to marry him and she had promised to do so."

"You mean that your mother has actually promised?"

"She would, Charles. Lutman had offered to make her an allowance of $5,000 a year of her own, and mother would promise anything to anybody to get that, poor darling! I tried to tell her a few things about Lutman, but she wouldn't listen, and it all ended up by her ordering me out and forbidding me ever to go back. And here I am. That's the whole story as I've pieced it together, Charles. Is it all correct?"

"No, Jacqueline. Nearly, but not quite."

"What's wrong with it?"

"For one thing, Lutman didn't kidnap you."

"If you're suggesting that I've imagined it all . . ."

"I'm not. I'm just saying that when you blame Lutman for the kidnaping you're wrong; he didn't do it. I know—because I did it myself."

"You!" gasped Jacqueline. "At least I was responsible for it," continued the lawyer. "Captain Allwright actually did the job for me. He's very obliging about that sort of thing."

Jacqueline regarded him fixedly. "Charles, you're lying."

"That's why I told you on the telephone that I couldn't see you until 8 o'clock in the evening, Jacqueline. I wanted time to get hold of Allwright and fix it up."

The girl shook her head. "I don't know why you're doing it, Charles, but you're lying. I know you're lying, and I'll tell you why I know. Whoever did the kidnaping offered Joplin 500 pounds if he'd be kind enough to do me in and pitch what was left of me overboard. Joplin told me so himself."

"In that case," smiled Charles, "Joplin exceeded his duty. I suppose you were proving a bit of a handful, and he wanted to scare you into behaving yourself properly. All I offered him was five pounds a week to take care of you. Listen, Jacqueline. I'm telling you the truth now. I did kidnap you. I couldn't think of any other means of making sure that Lutman wouldn't find you. I knew what was in his mind. He hadn't actually said as much, but he had let me see that if he couldn't get you to marry Jim Asson and couldn't marry you himself, he meant to get the money in the only other way open to him—by getting rid of you and marrying your mother. I knew he was capable of doing it. They've never been able to get the evidence to arrest him, but I happen to know that the police believe he's guilty of two murders which have never been solved, and I didn't dare risk it. The only safe way was to hold you somewhere and keep you there until things had sorted themselves out. As a matter of fact, I went to the barge this evening and was scared out of my life when Joplin told me you'd disappeared. I was afraid Lutman had somehow managed to get you."

"He did his best, Charles. And when I couldn't be found, didn't he suspect?"

"I didn't give him the chance," smiled Charles. "I went for him before he had a chance to go for me. I accused him of having kidnaped you, and demanded to know where you were; I threatened to go to the police if he didn't tell me. He swallowed it all and had no idea that I knew where you were and was responsible for putting you there. He tried to give me the impression that he had hidden you away somewhere himself so that I shouldn't get at you and—tell you things. Now do you believe me?"

"All right, Charles; I believe you. But the next time you think of boarding me out you might find someone a bit more attractive than the Joplin. And now what? There's mother, Charles. We must do something. She has promised to marry Lutman."

"There's nothing to be done to-night, anyway," said Stuckey. "She can't marry Lutman until tomorrow, and she's not likely to marry him at all. Lutman will see to that. Your refusing to sink and turning up again will upset his wedding plans, and I'm afraid your mother is going to have a disappointment. But she had better be disappointed that way than by marrying a blackguard like Lutman."

The telephone bell rang noisily, and Charles turned and picked up the receiver.

"Hullo! Yes, Charles Stuckey speaking."

He clapped a hand over the mouthpiece and glanced across at Jacqueline.

"Lutman," he said, and uncovered the mouthpiece. "Yes, I shall be here all night. All right, but not for an hour, Lutman. I'm working on a case. Very well—12 o'clock. I shall be finished by then. Goodbye."

He replaced the receiver. "He's coming to see me—at 12 o'clock. That's because of you, Jacqueline. He has realized that the game's up as far as marrying your mother is concerned, and he's coming along with some fresh scheme."

"In that case, I'd better clear out."

"You can't," interrupted Charles. "You can't go home, and you're not fit to go anywhere. You're all in. The best thing you can do is to stay here."

"But if Lutman's coming here . . ."

"There's a room upstairs," said Charles. "There's a bed of sorts. I sometimes sleep there when I'm late at the office. It's a bit rough and ready, but you can get some rest, and I shall want you here in the morning. We shall have to get hold of your mother and break the news to her, and you'd better be here. I'll show you, shall I?"

He led the way up the winding staircase and into the room. "It's not much of a place," he began.

"There's a thing that looks something like a bed, Charles," smiled the girl, "and in 10 seconds I shall be asleep. Good night, Charles."

"Listen, Jacqueline," said Stuckey, "shall you be nervous if I go out for a bit? I want to see if Allwright. His boat is berthed close by and I shan't be gone for more than half an hour. I'll lock the office door and you'll be perfectly safe."

"Righto, Charles."

"I'll give a knock on the door to let you know when I'm back."

She nodded. "But I probably shan't hear you."

Accordingly, Charles, when he returned from his visit to Captain Allwright, tiptoed up the stairs and gave the softest tap on Jacqueline's door—a tap so soft that it could not have wakened even the lightest sleeper. Yet instantly came her voice.

"That you, Charles?"

"All O. K., Jacqueline?"

"Quite, thanks. Open the door, please, Charles; it isn't locked."

Charles opened the door and stood in the doorway.

"Yes, Jacqueline?"

"There's something I want to ask you."

"Well?"

There was a pause. Then: "You did know, Charles, didn't you? About Lutman's pretty little plot, I mean."

Charles was suddenly very grateful for the darkness.

"Yes, Jacqueline, I knew all about it."

"And you were in it, too?"

"Yes."

"Just how far, Charles?"

"Right up to my neck."

Again there was a silence before the girl asked:

"Why?"

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA The distinction of being a ham and a splendid actor at the same time goes to "Wafford," an important player in "Waikiki Wedding," the comedy with Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye and Shirley Ross which is currently playing at the Cliftona Theatre.

"Wafford" is—you guessed it—a pig. He's Bob Burns' pet and the affection between the two is the bane of Miss Raye's existence because she loves Burns too.

AT THE CIRCLE The longest movie kiss on record since silent pictures smacked its way through 5400 frames of celluloid film when "Boy" Spencer Tracy met "Girl" Jean Harlow. It was a scene from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Libeled Lady" now at the Circle Theatre, in which Jean Harlow is married off to William Powell by her fiancé, Spencer Tracy, against her wishes.

HOOSIERS TAKE SECOND STRAIGHT FROM BREWERS

BY UNITED PRESS
The Indianapolis Indians — the cellar spot American association club—walked away with its second victory over the top-spot Milwaukee Brewers yesterday.

In a 14-inning game, the Indians put a man on base in the final inning, then walked him across home plate to win 3 to 2. Winegarner passed three successive men to give away the game.

Toledo edged to within two points of second place with a 5 to 1 win over Minneapolis, now occupying that position. The Columbus Red Birds split a series with St. Paul by a 9 to 6 win.

Kansas City, failing to follow an early lead, lost to Louisville 10 to 15. The Zwilling-pen had made seven runs in the first two innings, when the Colonels in the last half of the second pounded out eight runs. A 5-run spurge in the seventh broke a 10-10 tie.

Games today: Kansas City at Indianapolis (night game); St. Paul at Toledo; Milwaukee at Louisville; Minneapolis at Columbus.

AMERICAN LOOP RACE HOTTER AS MACKS TAKE TOP

NEW YORK, May 18.—(UP)—The hottest American league pennant race in years swung into its second month today with only four games separating the league-leading Philadelphia Athletics from the last-place Washington Senators.

The National league finds the Pittsburgh Pirates out in front by a 3½ game margin and labeled as "the team to beat." With a 10-day home stand against the weaker eastern clubs ahead of them, the Pirates are likely to entrench themselves deeper in first place.

The second inter-sectional series of the season opened today with the western clubs in the American league playing in the East and the eastern clubs in the National league playing in the West for the next 10 days. In the first inter-sectional games the strength in the National league swung to the West and the power in the American league to the East.

Looking down the American league standing we find the Boston Red Sox in fifth place but only two games back of the A's. Two days results could send the Red Sox into a tie for the lead. The Yankees, who at this time last year were in front never to be headed, trail the Athletics by half a game after tossing away their 1-day lead.

NESTELL AND PASTOR AGREE TO FIGHT DELAY

LOS ANGELES, May 18.—(UP)—All interested parties conceded today that Bob Nestell and Bob Pastor of New York will box the 10-round main event of an outdoor program at Wrigley field, and that they will do it May 28 instead of May 24 as scheduled originally.

Agreement to the delay was reached after the loudest and longest state athletic commission hearing held in this city, and after Gus Wilson and James J. Johnston, Jr., the managers, backed down from original statements that if each did not get his way the bout was off.

REDS NEARING CELLAR AFTER 2-5 LOSS TO CUBS

CINCINNATI, May 18.—(UP)—The Cincinnati Reds were in imminent danger today of falling back into the National league cellar as they prepared to open a two game series with the Boston Bees. Cincinnati lost the final contest of a series here yesterday to the Chicago Cubs by a 5 to 2 count. The defeat dropped the Reds into a tie for seventh place with the idle Bees.

YESTERDAY'S HERO—Linus Frey, subbing at shortstop for the Chicago Cubs, who drove out a double and triple, stole a base, scored one run and drove in three others in his team's 5-2 win over the Reds.

About This And That In Many Sports

By BILL BRAUCHER
Southpaws Stand Out

NEW YORK, May 18.—It is unfortunate that Carl Hubbell's great pitching record of 21 straight games must be qualified in the record books by the winter of rest between his sixteenth and seventeenth consecutive victories . . . but it is no misfortune for the boys are writing about the streak as though Hub has set a new world record . . . the Giants are pretty sure to catch King Carl's competitive fire . . . a ball club with a pitcher who is hot is a hard club to beat whether the ace is pitching or not . . . a pitching streak gives a team a lot of confidence and momentum.

The Giants of 1912 got so tough in the period when Rube Marquard was rolling up his record that they might have won with McGraw himself on the mound . . . Smokey Joe Wood, now baseball coach at Yale, was pitching 16 straight for the Red Sox that year, too, and the Boston club went on beating the other teams whether Joe was in there or not . . . they had acquired the winning habit . . .

Ranks with Grove

Six years ago the same thing happened in the American league, when Lefty Grove suddenly became invulnerable and fire-balled his way through 16 straight victories . . . the Athletics were unstoppable . . . every player on the club believed he was helping Grove to win . . . and went on helping other pitchers to win through faith in himself . . . ball players are that way, you know . . . I have heard infielders pat themselves on the back by mentioning their pride in the fact that they played on the A's when Lefty was enjoying that streak . . . as though they had played dramatic parts in the play themselves . . .

Schupp's Feat Greatest

To get back to southpaws again, the boys have to drag out the name of Ferdie Schupp when they want to speak of effectiveness . . . back in 1916 Schupp was so good that figuratively the enemy didn't get a run off him in 30 games . . . he got into 30 games that year, and allowed the opponents of the Giants 90 earned runs per game . . . Left handers have left some marks for control, too . . . 30 years ago "Doc" White of the White Sox didn't walk a man for 65 consecutive innings . . . but when I think of control, the picture of Herb Pennock in his last few years with the Yankees comes to mind . . . his fast one gone forever, he depended upon aim and knowledge of batters . . . I think Pennock was one of the smoothest, most graceful performers the game has known.

INDIANS BEGIN EASTERN TOUR; HARDER TO PITCH

BOSTON, Mass., May 18.—(UP)—An eastern tour which may decide the ultimate fate of the Cleveland Indians in the American league pennant chase was to be opened by the club here today.

Manager Steve O'Neill nominated his veteran ace, Mel Harder, to work the opening game of the series against the Boston Red Sox. Fritz Asternmueller was to oppose him.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

FORESIGHT TO THE EXTREME

MOST PLAYERS would consider a 7-card suit headed by the 3 top honors as certain to set up. A fine bridge player, however, should not even take a thing like that for granted, but should make a safety play, if possible, to guard himself against its not breaking properly. Foresight in such matters can pay big rewards.

Instead of taking it with one of the honors. He then went after trumps. With 9 trumps in the two hands, the chances slightly favored the drop of the Q, except that one opponent indicated extreme length in certain suits. Declarer therefore took the first trump trick with the K, then led the 10, to induce a cover, which didn't work. The 10 won and was followed by the A. Now the club K made an entry into dummy to run all of the diamonds, on which all five of South's losing hearts were discarded.

Playing the hand this way—making sure first that he would fulfill his contract and secondly, giving himself every possible chance to cash extra tricks, the declarer reaped a rich reward for his care.

ATLANTA

Melvin's Log Cabin was the scene of the Junior-Senior banquet this year. The delicious three-course dinner was served at tables in the main dining room. of the supreme court and older than any other justice except the veteran liberal, Louis Brandeis, has long been expected to retire. It was believed he had continued in his supreme court post for some time longer than he had personally desired of the constant series of important issues placed before the court for decision by constitutional tests of New Deal enactments.

Only Justice James Clark McReynolds has voted against the constitutionality of more New Deal measures than Van Devanter. Of 22 vital New Deal Tests, Van Devanter has joined his conservative colleagues, Justices George Sutherland, Pierce Butler and McReynolds in condemning 13 Roosevelt enactments.

Wrote No Decisions

Despite his leading part in court opposition to administration legislation, Van Devanter has never written a majority or minority opinion on a New Deal question. This was attributed to the fact of his age and frail health. Court colleagues, desirous to enable him to continue on the bench, relieved him so far as possible of routine duties.

Like all supreme court justices, Van Devanter has lived a quiet and reclusive-like existence. Especially has this been true since the death of his wife in 1934. His associates said he planned to leave the court at that time but was persuaded to continue temporarily.

A native of Wyoming, Van Devanter all his life was fond of the outdoor life. In recent years he had purchased a farm near the small, old Maryland town of Elliott City and there he had passed much of his time. His friends believed that he purchased the farm with a view to retiring there and anticipated that he would spend much of his time in the quiet rural retreat now that his decision to quit the court has finally been made.

Friends of the white-haired justice said that he had been contemplating retirement for the last two or three years and had definitely made up his mind to do so when congress adopted the law providing for retirement on full pay.

Van Devanter felt, however, that he should not relinquish his duties in the supreme tribunal until the present term of court was completed.

To Continue Service

He expects—if called on—to receive assignments and to perform his duties on one of the circuit benches, working intermittently at the direction of the chief justice and hopes thus to continue of service to his country for many years to come.

Van Devanter will continue to live at his apartment house home in Washington and on his farm in Howard county, Md. He will spend most of this summer on the farm and then will go to the Seignior club in Canada.

the story, but detectives recorded it with more than casual interest. They had just listened to Mrs. Tiernan's confession that she loved Christie so much she had agreed to sacrifice her children to make room for him in her small apartment.

"I held Helen while George hit her," Mrs. Tiernan told police. "Then I cut her throat."

Police believed it unlikely that Mrs. Tiernan would ever pay the extreme penalty for her unnatural deed. They revealed that her mother was a psychopathic case for the last 15 years of her life. George Smith, 60, her father and an unemployed machinist, said the mother died eight years ago in the state hospital for the insane at Central Islip, N. Y.

Man's Part Denied

Christie, swarthy and handsome, admitted that he had told Mrs. Tiernan he might marry her if the children were out of the way, but he steadfastly denied that he had had any part in the killing.

Little Helen, who had won the love of the neighbors in the tenement district where her mother has a $20-a-month two-room apartment, died from burns rather than from wounds inflicted by a carving knife, a pair of scissors and a hatchet, medical examiners believed.

Jimmy, left for dead in the thorny underbrush a few yards from a main highway, suffered concussion of the brain. But he sat up in a hospital bed, and his confused, baby mind poured out the story that sent detectives after his mother.

"Mommy took Helen and me on the train," he babbled. "When we got off the train George and another man were there in a shiny blue car. George is my other papa."

Gently, detectives questioned the boy.

"Then what, Jimmy?"

"Mommy took us along the road and into some woods."

"Did Mommy hit you?"

"Mommy hit sister."

"Did George hurt you?"

"George bought us ice cream. Then he hurt us."

Mrs. Tiernan at first declared that a "strange man" had attacked her and had run off into the woods with the children. He had come on them, she said, while they were enjoying a picnic. Then she was told what Jimmy had said.

"It's true," she said, calmly. "Everything Jimmy says is true. Almost everything, anyhow. I had to get rid of the two of them. They were in the way."

Federal men were sent here from Cincinnati to work on the case. A box was placed in the yard and a rag on the fence, but neither was disturbed.

Miss Dungan was then instructed to write a note asking additional instructions be given and a place other than the fence designated. Although the note did not appear disturbed it is believed it was read and replaced.

The second letter was received on Feb. 16, and hurried arrangements were made to comply with the terms. Miss Dungan was instructed to enter a car about 4 p. m., go north on Court street to the postoffice, then west on Mound across the river bridge and toss out the package of money at the first turn west of the bridge.

The package was prepared by federal agents, in conjunction with Sheriff Charles Radcliff. They were at the designated spot on the highway when the car appeared. One agent was concealed behind a tree and two others were farther west on the highway awaiting developments.

the family. Edward's brothers and his mother wanted the Duke of Kent and perhaps Mary, the princess royal, to attend and show the world the family has not cast off the abdicated monarch.

The government said "no." The cabinet "advised" the royal family that it does not care to show royal approval of the former monarch to the twice-divorced American woman.

The limited wedding party may include only Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers, who were Mrs. Warfield's hosts at Cannes; Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bedaux, the duke's hosts here; Baron Eugene De Rothschild and his American wife, the duke's hosts at Enzesfeld, Austria.

The British minister to Austria, Sir Walford Selby and Lady Selby, also closely associated with the duke in Austria, will attend if the British foreign office allows.

The wedding falls on the birthday of the duke's late father, George V.

"Needed Room For Lover," New York Police Told After Brutal Murder

NEW YORK, May 18 — (UP) — Mrs. Helen Tiernan, 25-year-old blonde, petite widow, may have attempted for months to dispose of her two blue-eyed children so that she could live alone with the man she loved, it was intimated today.

While police charged Mrs. Helen Tiernan, and her lover, George Christodoulus, with the murder of Mrs. Tiernan's blue-eyed seven year old daughter, Helen, Owen Connelly, her neighbor, told police that Helen and her brother, Jimmy, 4, had almost died from gas 10 months ago in what appeared then to be an accident.

Jimmy also had been an intended victim of a child massacre in the woods near Brookhaven, Long Island, Saturday morning, but had survived the clubbing, knifing and fire that killed his sister. His baby prattle led to the arrest of his mother. For hours she tried desperately to protect the man she loved, but early today she confessed that the Greek restaurant worker who calls himself George Christie, had helped her kill her daughter.

Connelly insisted that Mrs. Tiernan was a "good woman." Ten months ago he passed through the corridor outside Mrs. Tiernan's apartment and smelled gas. He broke in and found the children almost dead. Mrs. Tiernan explained that she had gone out, leaving a pot on the stove. It had boiled over, she said, putting out the flame. Connelly still believed

BRIEF MESSAGE SENT TO F. D. BY NEW DEAL FOE

Dean of Conservatives, 78, Discloses Intention As Senate Vote Nears

BULLETIN
WASHINGTON, May 18. — (UP)—Retirement of the conservative justice, Willis Van Devanter, from the supreme court today brought immediate repercussions in President Roosevelt's judiciary fight. The senate judiciary committee approved an adverse report to the senate on the court enlargement program.

The judiciary committee vote and the Van Devanter retirement heightened strong congressional indications that Roosevelt's program is headed for compromise revision or outright defeat.

Senator Borah, who announced the vote, said the committee also voted to reject all compromise amendments.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—(UP)—Justice Willis Van Devanter, dean of the supreme court conservatives who have voted almost invariably against President Roosevelt's New Deal legislation, today announced his retirement from the supreme bench.

The announcement of the venerable jurist's intentions was made known in a brief note to President Roosevelt.

Van Devanter, who celebrated his 78th birthday April 17, will quit the high court post he has occupied since Jan. 3, 1911 on June 2—the day following the supreme court's final session of this term.

Announcement of Van Devanter's retirement—a factor of vital effect in President Roosevelt's drive for enactment of his supreme court enlargement plan—came on the very day the senate judiciary committee was scheduled to meet to take a final vote on the court plan.

Court Quits June 1

Only yesterday the supreme court announced that it would quit for the year on June 1. Van Devanter apparently had been waiting only for the final decision on a court adjournment date in order to announce that he was quitting his court position.

DUKE AND WALLY TO WED JUNE 3 IN CANDE CASTLE

No Member of Royal British Family to Attend Ceremony For Former King

MONTS, France, May 18.—(UP)—The Duke of Windsor, who gave up his throne for Mrs. Wallis Warfield, will marry her here on June 3 with no member of the British royal family present, Herman L. Rogers announced at the Chateau De Candé today on behalf of the former king.

The announcement was published in an official communique from the duke himself, and delivered to some 180 reporters who waited outside the chateau.

It settled at long last the dispute over whether the duke's brothers and sisters, or any member of the royal family, would be present, thus lending official sanction to the marriage.

Notice Disclosed

"His royal highness the Duke of Windsor announces that his marriage to Mrs. Wallis Warfield, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Teakle Wallis Warfield of Maryland, will take place at the Chateau at Monts on June 3.

The communique revealed that only those who have been with the duke and Mrs. Warfield since last November will attend.

"Invitations to the wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Warfield will be confined to those who have been with them in the past months," the communique said. "No member of the royal family will be present."

The communique referred to the bride-to-be as Mrs. Wallis Warfield throughout.

The announcement that no member of the royal family would attend meant that the family's official blessing on the wedding, despite their affection for the duke, is being withheld.

Attempted Extortion of Jemima Dungan to Cost Neighbor His Freedom

UNDERWOOD ON BENCH

Mill Street Man May Go To Narcotics Farm

William W. Madden, 58, was sentenced to serve five years in a federal prison, Tuesday, by U. S. Judge Mell G. Underwood on a charge of attempting to extort $1,500 from Miss Jemima Dungan, his E. Mill street neighbor.

Madden changed his plea to guilty when his case was called in federal court in Columbus Tuesday morning. He had previously denied the charges.

Madden told Judge Underwood he had been a narcotic user for 15 years, since he lost his left leg in an accident. Underwood said he would grant Madden leniency because of his physical condition.

Madden testified he did not know what he was doing because of the narcotics. He said he did not recall writing the note or any of the subsequent developments.

"I didn't know what I was doing when I was under the influence of the drug," he said. "My wife told me following a party at which there were a lot of ladies present that I dressed and undressed 15 or 20 times before the women."

Davis, his attorney, said the facts were "undisputed."

Davis said the drug had such a grip on Madden that during the flood the defendant hired a boat to "get a shot of morphine" from his doctor who had been assigned to National Guard duty in another city.

High Penalty Provided

The penalty provided under the law includes from one to 20 years in prison and a fine as high as $5,000. Madden was not fined. Under federal law, Madden can have much time cut off for good behavior.

It is believed probable that Madden will be confined in the federal narcotic farm near Louisville, Ky.

However, the assignment will be made by Attorney General Cummings in Washington, D. C., all federal cases going through his office.

Madden was accompanied to the U. S. court by his attorney, Ray W. Davis.

Madden was arrested Tuesday, Feb. 16, by federal postal authorities when he picked up a "dummy" package of money tossed along Route 22, at the first curve west of the river bridge. The package was thrown from a taxicab by Miss Dungan in compliance with the terms of a letter she had received.

The first letter was received by Miss Dungan on Feb. 16. It instructed her to put $1,500 in $5, $10 and $20 bills in a can and place it in her yard along an alley fence. She was to hang a rag on the fence to designate the spot where the can was located. The money was to be ready between Feb. 6 and 28.

C. I. O. Carries Lancaster Fight Higher

LANCASTER, May 18.—(UP)—John Owens, Ohio director of the Committee for Industrial Organization, said today he had reported to the United States senate civil liberties committee the barring of two field organizers from Lancaster Sunday.

George De Nucci and Avery Dennis, Columbus C. I. O. organizers, were met at the city limits by Lancaster police and escorted back toward Columbus. De Nucci was to have spoken at a meeting of Hocking Glass Co. employees here.

Owens said that, if necessary, he would go to Lancaster to address glass workers.

"The only way they can keep me from speaking is to arrest me," Owens said.

Mayor Charles E. Moyer of Lancaster said no attempt would be made to bar labor organizers from the city "if peace can be assured."

"The reason we asked De Nucci to return to Columbus was because we were certain there would be trouble if he spoke," Moyer said.

The 3400 Hocking Glass Co. employees received letters from I. J. Collins, president of the company, notifying them they would receive a one-week vacation with pay in July or August when the plant is closed for repairs. In previous years, workers were not paid for loss of time during repairs.

"In view of your loyalty to the company, the management has found it possible to grant you a week's vacation with pay," Collins' letter read.

"Quite a Few" Dismissals Expected in Next Six Months' Time

MONEY BILL DRAFTED

All Departments Combed For Reductions

COLUMBUS, May 18.—(UP)—Governor Martin L. Davey today began a drive to cut "inefficient and unnecessary" employees from state payrolls, and promised "quite a few" dismissals within six months.

"We have been combing all departments for possible reductions," he said. "We have set out on a serious program of economy, and we feel that now is the time to take action since jobs are plentiful."

The governor indicated that he will oppose any efforts of senate insurgents to whittle possible savings from his general appropriations bill, to be considered by a special session of the legislature in June.

"The members of the senate who attempted to cut from the appropriations bill didn't know what they were doing," he said.

The governor said that a new appropriations bill being prepared by the finance director would be practically the same as that killed by the senate insurgent group in the recent regular session.

This bill provided for state expenditures of approximately $89,000,000 for the next two years. Anti-administration forces claimed that it actually provided for expenditures of $83,000,000 because of an "error" in the method of listing expenditures of the state tax commission.

Insurgents turned down this proposal, drafted one of their own, lumping all state appropriations, including those for old age pensions and liquor into one bill. After amendments were made on the floor, this program represented a total saving of approximately $14,000,000.

Referring to the $14,000,000 savings by the insurgent action, the governor said they were "paper savings" and "many of them cruel and unjustified."

Ashville's Joint Board Hires, Listens To Mayor

Only One Vacancy Exists In Teaching Roster For Next Year

By S. D. FRIDLEY
Phone Ashville 79

The Ashville-Harrison board of education met in regular session Monday evening and transacted the regular business of paying bills, etc. All the teachers were reemployed for the year 1937-38 except Mr. Spence, the English teacher, who had presented a written request that he not be considered an applicant.

The schedule for next year has already been made out and, when Mr. Spence's successor has been selected, the high school will be all set to reopen for 1937-38.
Harry Margulis, mayor of the village, appeared before the board in behalf of the council regarding the improvements which have recently been made at the village park. His suggestion that the board pay for the improvements, since they were made for the school students mainly, were taken under advisement but no definite conclusion reached.

Ashville—May, 1888, Snow Recalled
Yes, it did hail Sunday and many that I met Monday told me about it. And along with this they asked me if I remembered so and so about that time when it did or didn't. Bill Abbott told me about the 8th of May snow in 1888, when many tree limbs were broken down by its weight. The early gardens were not injured. Asked him about that good sweet corn he always raises for all of us and he replied that it was "not doing so well, too cold and wet," he said.

Ashville—Rayman Recalled
Walter Rayman told me this morning that he had just returned from Cleveland where he had visited with his only living brother, Elmer, who is 77 years of age and in poor health. It will be remembered by our older readers that Elmer was the first or among the first teachers in Madison high school, then located at St. Paul.

Ashville—Many Incidents Recalled
Jacob Glick, Walnut township, is one of the "old war horses" yet sticking around, not old, but has lived a good while. Is active, does anything he takes a notion he wants to do, drives his auto anywhere and can tell about many things that happened years and years ago when he was a young man.

Back in the early eighties he and his brother Alfred, now deceased, conducted a livery and feed stable here in Ashville where the Don and Bill garage now is.

He hauled bricks for now Plum's hall and the first school house and did the hauling for old Walnut township election house. He and his family have lived on the 240-acre Huber farm near what is known as Nebraska, for more than twenty-six years and "a lot of things have happened in that time that no one ever thought could," he said.

THREE ACTORS, SINGER

Three movie actors and a radio, night club and screen singer join Bing Crosby next Thursday night, May 20, in the Music Hall. Guests are Lee Tracy, the screen's dynamic comedy actor; Connie Boswell, singer; Lionel Stander and William Gargan of the films.

Stander is returning for his second successive week on the broadcast over the NBC red network at 9 p. m. (EST). Miss Boswell appeared on three hours notice three weeks ago when Grete Steuckgold's husband died the day of the broadcast. She will sing popular and novelty songs. At present, Miss Boswell is singing at a Los Angeles hotel.

Tracy and Gargan make their contribution to the Music Hall program with interviews of the well known Crosby type.

"50 PLUS" "30 MINUS"

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is one of the few radio personalities who do not use radio's "sign language," the production man's tell-tale system of signaling the stars that they are running ahead or behind time.

Mrs. Roosevelt has learned a few of the signals, although not deliberately, but has found it necessary to use them. During the breaks in her program production men write notes and lay them before her. These notes explain that she is 45 seconds ahead, 20 seconds behind, with a cryptic "50 plus" or "20 minus."

She regulates the speed of her voice accordingly.

The first two broadcasts of her Wednesday chats over the NBC blue network at 6:15 p. m. went off exactly as timed in rehearsal and no signals at all were necessary. On the third, however, she picked up 50 seconds before Virginia Barr read the commercial announcement.

Blue Mosquitoes Cause Panic
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa.—(UP)—Appearance of lark blue mosquitoes struck terror in a certain area of northern Transvaal, where a severe epidemic of malaria was already raging. Local residents feared some new horror until the clerk of a country store, observing something wriggling in an inkwell, discovered it to be full of mosquito larvae, in which apparently they had bred.

TRIO ARRESTED AS SUSPECTS IN BOMBING SERIES

One Man Confesses, Fort Wayne, Ind. Authorities Tell New York

ALL SOUGHT IN EAST

Labor Trouble Cited For Gotham Blastings

FORT WAYNE, Ind., May 18 (UP)—Three men described as ring-leaders of a nation-wide bombing ring were hailed into city court today for hearing on fugitive warrants preliminary to their removal to New York.

New York investigators who arrested them here in Kokomo, Ind., said one of them confessed the Brooklyn theatre bombing for which they were indicted, and implicated the other two.

"I have definite evidence that these men were involved in coercive activities throughout the southwest as well," said Lieutenant James Pike of the New York City bomb squad.

In Brooklyn, District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan described the men as "the brains behind the throwing of stench bombs and other offensive matter in motion picture theatres not only in Brooklyn and all of greater New York, but also throughout the country."

Labor Trouble Blamed
The bombing of Brooklyn's Star theatre, in November, 1936, on which the indictments were based, was attributed to labor trouble between rival unions of motion picture projection room operators.

One of the prisoners, Charles C. (Eddie) Smith, 38, Fort Wayne, is secretary-treasurer of Fort Wayne's Motion Picture Operators Alliance.

Charles Smith was arrested at his home with Leo K. (Izzy) Smith, 48, Fred C. Blacker, 50, was arrested in his home in Kokomo, Ind. The three had been named in fugitive warrants issued in Kings county, New York. They were placed in Allen county jail, under bonds of $10,000 each.

Charles Donovan, 39, found with Blacker in the latter's home, was held for investigation under $2,000 bond.

Papers Discovered
Principal evidence against Donovan were papers which officers said they found in his pocket. Pike said the papers contained formulae for chemical bombs.

Leo Smith confessed taking part in the Star theatre bombing, Pike said, and named Charles Smith and Blacker as his confederates. All four signed waivers of extradition.

GAINES, 19, PUT ON PAROLE FOR NEXT TWO YEARS

Floyd Gaines, 19, of Columbus, formerly of Circleville, was placed under probation for two years Monday by Judge J. W. Adkins on a burglary and larceny charge.

Gaines was indicted with Woodrow Caldwell, 21, of Circleville, R. F. D., in connection with the theft of about $5 from the Shelby & McCrady lunch room last Feb. 6. Caldwell was recently placed under a similar probation.

COUNTIAN NAMED TO DIRECT NEW W. P. A. PROJECT

Harry Reichelderfer, E. Main street, supervisor of the Pickaway county rural sanitation project, under W. P. A. has been placed in charge of the project in Fayette county also.

W. P. A. workers will finish pouring concrete on the Five Points bridge project this week. All concrete work will be complete with the exception of the railings and they will not be constructed for several weeks.

The city sanitary sewer project will be completed the last of this week.

ARKANSAS GETS YOUNG SLAYER

Three States File Papers For Brockelhurst; Girl To Face Charges

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 18 (UP)—Lester Brockelhurst, 23, itinerant slayer, and his 18-year-old sweetheart, Bernice Felton, left for Little Rock, Ark., in custody early today to face a first degree murder charge.

The girl's father, Abraham Felton, left with Illinois officials for his home in Rockford, Ill. He told Brockelhurst that he was sorry "You're not going to Illinois." He had been the youth's guardian under a parole that freed him from an Illinois reformatory.

Brockelhurst was disappointed bitterly in the decision of Governor Herbert H. Lehman to give him to Arkansas authorities instead of those of Illinois or Texas who also want him for murder. He believes he will be executed and

It was at the insistence of Texas authorities, who charged Brockelhurst with the murder of Jack Griffith, Fort Worth tavern keeper, that the contest was decided by the governor.

Prosecutor P. Milton, of Lonoke county, Ark., explained that his state had issued murder warrants for both Brockelhurst and Miss Felton in connection with the slaying of Victor Gates, plantation owner. He argued that it would be unfair to send them to Texas or Illinois, where the girl would be freed.

Governor Lehman ruled that Arkansas had a stronger case against them than Illinois and Texas, which issued murder warrants only for Brockelhurst. The youth was said by police to have confessed homicides in each of the three states during a three-month joyride of crime, which began in Rockford with the slaying of Albin Theander, a tailor.

VISIONS THAT FADED

THE War Department discloses that at least 55,000,000 trained soldiers can "spring to arms overnight" in 48 nations, and that the standing armies of the world now total 6,500,000 men.

Writing of Europe in the current Atlantic, an American observer of obvious competence describes the quiet exodus from more than one capital to rural areas remote from possible air attacks, the construction of bomb-proof cellars and subterranean airports, the mining of frontier roads, the imbedding of steel rails in the soil to impede the progress of tanks and trucks.

The terrific excess profits tax in Chancellor Chamberlain's new budget has shocked financial London, and not all his eulogizing of "the golden shower" of the British rearmament program can disguise the fact that the national energies are being diverted from useful and productive enterprise.

The League of Nations is disestablished. Europe is falling back on a series of regional pacts and diplomatic realignments, of which the development of the "Berlin-Rome axis" is of great current significance. Peace, where peace lies within the intention of governments, depends upon individual effort. The London Times points out, as the wolf demonstrated on the lamb, that two are not needed to make a quarrel, but that it takes two to compose one.

The smaller states in Central and South-eastern Europe, multiplied in number since the frontier-drawing of 1919, are under beguilement and pressure to join one armed camp or another. Except in The Netherlands and Scandinavia budgets are unbalanced, and even Great Britain, in her race to build ships and planes, is borrowing against the future. The United States, which ranks tenth as concerns the standing armies of the world and nineteenth in potential trained reserves, is spending close to $1,000,000,000 per annum on preparations for war. Even Switzerland, which has 309 men under arms, can call up 600,000 reserves.

This is the situation in the Spring of 1937, almost two decades after the statesmen of the world saw visions of permanent peace in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles.

The average embezzler gets away with $6,278 before he is caught, a bonding company avers, which just about covers attorneys' fees.

Oswald Garrison Villard thinks that the boys who do the fighting should get a chance to vote for or against war. All they get now is a chance, if lucky, to collect on hospitalization, pensions and bonuses.

World At A Glance

The Queen's Work, national Catholic magazine, published in St. Louis, which recently undertook a poll of the congressional press gallery members relative to 1940's Democratic presidential possibilities, will contain in its May issue the completed result of its investigation.

It is interesting. The Queen's Work's system of scoring is complicated, making it difficult to determine the correspondents' estimates of the various candidates in their order of probability. However, the list (of 23) is available.

To begin, two more correspondents mention Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania as a possibility than there are who mention any other candidate. Next in line is President Roosevelt.

On the opposite hand, of those who mention the president a larger proportion are pretty sure of him than there are who mention the governor.

F. D. R. FIRST CHOICE That is to say, the president is the premier selection of the great majority of those who mention him; Earle is more largely a second or third guess of those who mention him.

PRESIDENT "TOUGH AND SORE"

WASHINGTON—The President minced no words when he conferred with the congressional leaders following his return from Texas. He was blunt and full of fight. One of the conferees described him as "tough and sore."

"There will be no compromise on the court issue now or later," the President told the Democratic chieftains. "And that goes for relief too. I am standing pat on both issues."

Roosevelt expressed the firm conviction that the Administration can win on both measures, and he made it clear that he expected the leaders to back him 100 per cent. In return, he assured them of militant support.

Of the four leaders who consulted with the President only one, Vice President Jack Garner, urged a conciliatory attitude.

The Texan, who has become increasingly restless over the prospect of spending the summer in Washington, away from his spacious farm veranda and lazy fishing expeditions, advised compromising on the court bill with a two-judge deal and accepting a cut in the relief budget. He told the President such a program could be put through the Senate with dispatch and by a large vote. Roosevelt's answer was "nothing doing."

The other three conferees, Senate Leader Joe Robinson, Speaker Bankhead and House Leader Sam Rayburn, advocated a finish fight.

Robinson said the votes to carry the court bill in the Senate were to be had if a sufficiently vigorous effort was made to get them. Bankhead and Rayburn declared flatly the relief appropriation would go through the House without a cut. They also promised that if the Senate passed the court measure it would be approved by their chamber.

FARLEY'S ADVICE

Postmaster General Jim Farley had a hand in the President's decision to stand pat and fight. Big Jim accompanied him part of the way home and told Roosevelt that the Administration could not afford either to back down or be licked.

"There is more to this fight than just the fate of the court bill," Farley said. "What the leaders of the opposition really are aiming at is 1940. They are out to wrest control of the party from the Administration so they can put over a reactionary as the next presidential candidate."

"If we are licked on the court bill we are pretty nearly washed up. We can't compromise, and we can't afford to lose. The votes can be got if we go after them hard enough."

WIZARDRY

It will take all the President's vaunted political wizardry to win on the Supreme Court issue.

Right now his six-justice proposal is as dead as a dodo. The Administration is certain of only 46 Senate votes, three short of the majority necessary to put it through. Two months ago the White House could have mustered not less than 52 if there had been a showdown.

Critic observes that Europe has restored the old balance of power. The one that brought permanent peace—except for the World War.

DIET AND HEALTH

Theories of Food Faddists Scored

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"IF THE DEDUCTIONS of many food faddists accepted as facts, were really operative, it would be difficult to explain how the human race has survived," says a bulletin from the department of agriculture.

I am told that the book on "Hay Diet" is one of the best sellers in England, so the United States is not alone in its fondness for food fads, but more food notions flourish in the United States than in any other civilized country.

It is very easy to gull a public which remains profoundly ignorant of the most elementary facts of the science of nutrition. With a little smattering of physiology and chemistry, the food enthusiast can twist things to suit his purpose and create a system which thousands of people will follow blindly. Certain commercial manufacturers of vitamins are not entirely without blame in creating this atmosphere.

Food fads probably do less harm than drug fads, but sometimes by badly balanced diets they can create states of malnutrition. The greatest single bugaboo of the food faddist is meat. Upon meat has been heaped the blame for almost all the diseases of mankind.

Quite as silly as the no-meat fad itself is the scheme for separating starches and proteins—that is, vegetables and meats—and eating one class at separate meals. The digestive system is perfectly capable of taking care of both kinds of food at the same time. Nearly any kind of meat is digestible. The prejudice, for instance, against pork, on the grounds of digestibility, has been scouted by Ralph Hoagland, biochemist of the department of agriculture.

Meats Digestible

Meats, he says, are among the most digestible of human food products. Pork compares favorably with other meats in this quality. In comparative tests pork was digested in the stomach slightly more rapidly than turkey, in the same time as chicken, and slightly more slowly than beef or lamb.

Meats are esteemed in some places for reducing purposes. One of the most eminent nutritional authorities in the United States, Dr. E. V. McCollum of Johns Hopkins university, includes lean beef, lean ham, hamburger steak, and even a bit of bacon in his list of recommendations for reducing menus.

Some pseudo-scientific diet experts claim to be able to dissolve and expel gallstones by correct food and without operation. Another promises patients a cure for tuberculosis within 48 hours by diet. The cruelest of all is the man who assures patients that he can get rid of cancer by removing impurities through fasting. As a matter of fact, fasting is likely to increase the amount of poisons in the body, because when the body does not get food it burns up its own fatty tissue and the result is acidosis. No one has ever been cured by too prolonged fasting, since this impairs vitality, and every tissue cell must have food to keep up its own vitality.

I have expressed the above opinions many times, but it so happens that these are not my own, but are abstracted from an article by A. C. Hansen, M. D.

CHAPTER 53 "YOU SAY the $150,000 was to go to mother only if I weren't alive?" Jacqueline asked Charles. "Yes, of course," he was thoughtful for a few moments, and then went on. "As soon as I saw that copy of the will I understood everything—the pretty plot to get me to sign it all away and marry Jim Asson. I never could understand why Colonel Lutman was so desperately anxious for the marriage to come off, but I understood then. I suppose he was to have a share in the spoils."

"Yes. And so was I, Jacqueline." She took no notice of that confession.

"And that's why," she continued, "when I turned Jim Asson down, the Colonel so suddenly fell in love with me. He did, you know, Charles. He even asked me to marry him."

"Lutman's a swine," said the lawyer tersely.

"He doesn't make love very nicely, if that's what you mean. He . . ."

"She made a quick get away," then I telephone to you, Charles. You asked me to call at your flat, and on my way somebody put me out—with chloroform or something—and when I woke up I was on a barge on the river with some people called Joplins."

Charles nodded. "You don't seem a bit surprised, Charles."

"I'm not." "I couldn't at first understand why Colonel Lutman had done it. I went on. 'Kidnaping is a pretty risky game, and it struck me that to make it worth while he must have something really big in view. And then I suddenly realized. I remembered what the will said—that if I wasn't alive the money was to go to my mother. If I wasn't alive, Charles—that's the point. I thought I saw Lutman's game. I wouldn't marry Jim, and his only chance of laying hands on the money was to get rid of me and marry mother. I was certain that was what he had in mind."

"I was afraid it was." "And so it was, Charles. I got away from the barge—jumped for it and swam. There was a dreadful current and I thought I was done for; and then Lutman came along in his boat and I clung on and tried to get on board. But when he saw who it was he kicked my hands off the side and started up the engine and went off."

"Jacqueline! The swine! My God! If I ever get my hands on Lutman's throat . . ."

"Don't get excited, Charles. The police found me floating about and fished me out. As soon as they'd let me go from the hospital I dashed home. Lutman was there. He had just asked mother to marry him and she had promised to do so."

"You mean that your mother has actually promised?" "She would, Charles. Lutman had offered to make her an allowance of $5,000 a year of her own, and mother would promise anything to anybody to get that poor darling. I tried to tell her a few things about Lutman, but she wouldn't listen, and it all ended up by her ordering me out and forbidding me ever to go back. And here I am. That's the whole story as I've pieced it together, Charles. Is it all correct?"

"No, Jacqueline. Nearly, but not quite."

"What's wrong with it?" "For one thing, Lutman didn't kidnap you."

"If you're suggesting that I've imagined it all . . ."

"I'm not. I'm just saying that when you blame Lutman for the kidnaping you're wrong; he didn't do it. I know—because I did it myself."

"You?" gasped Jacqueline. "At least I was responsible for it," continued the lawyer. "Captain Allwright actually did the job for me. He's very obliging about that sort of thing."

Jacqueline regarded him fixedly. "Charles, you're lying."

"That's why I told you on the telephone that I couldn't see you until 8 o'clock in the evening, Jacqueline. I wanted time to get hold of Allwright and fix it up."

"The girl shook her head. 'I don't know why you're doing it, Charles, but you're lying. I know you're lying, and I'll tell you why I know. Whoever did the kidnaping offered Joplin 500 pounds if he'd be kind enough to do me in and pitch what was left of me overboard. Joplin told me so himself.'"

"In that case," smiled Charles, "Joplin exceeded his duty. I suppose you were proving a bit of a handful, and he wanted to scare you into behaving yourself properly. All I offered him was five pounds a week to take care of you. Listen, Jacqueline. I'm telling you the truth now. I did kidnap you. I couldn't think of any other means of making sure that Lutman wouldn't find you. I knew what was in his mind. He hadn't actually said as much, but he had let me see that if he couldn't get you to marry Jim Asson and couldn't marry you himself, he meant to get the money in the only other way open to him—by getting rid of you and marrying your mother. I knew he was capable of doing it. They've never been able to get the evidence to arrest him, but I happen to know that the police believe he's guilty of two murders which have never been solved, and I didn't dare risk it. The only safe way was to hold you somewhere and keep you there until things had sorted themselves out. As a matter of fact, I went to the barge this evening and was scared out of my life when Joplin told me you'd disappeared. I was afraid Lutman had somehow managed to get you."

"He did his best, Charles. And when I couldn't be found, didn't he suspect?"

"I didn't give him the chance," smiled Charles. "I sent for him before he had a chance to go for me. I accused him of having kidnaped you, and demanded to know where you were; I threatened to go to the police if he didn't tell me. He swallowed it all and had no idea that I knew where you were and was responsible for putting you there. He tried to give me the impression that he had hidden you away somewhere himself so that I shouldn't get at you and tell you things. Now do you believe me?"

"All right, Charles; I believe you. But the next time you think of boarding me out you might find someone a bit more attractive than the Joplins. And now what? There's mother, Charles. We must do something. She has promised to marry Lutman."

"There's nothing to be done tonight, anyway," said Stuckey. "She can't marry Lutman until tomorrow, and she's not likely to marry him at all. Lutman will see to that. Your refusing to sink and turning up again will upset his wedding plans, and I'm afraid your mother's going to have a disappointment. But she had better be disappointed that way than by marrying a blackguard like Lutman."

The telephone bell rang noisily, and Charles turned and picked up the receiver.

"Hello! Yes, Charles Stuckey speaking."

He clapped a hand over the mouthpiece and glanced across at Jacqueline.

"Lutman," he said, and uncovered the mouthpiece. "Yes, I shall be here all night. All right, but not for an hour, Lutman. I'm working on a case. Very well—12 o'clock. I shall be finished by then. Goodbye."

He replaced the receiver. "He's coming to see me—at 12 o'clock. That's because of you, Jacqueline. He has realized that the game's up as far as marrying your mother is concerned, and he's coming along with some fresh scheme."

"In that case, I'd better clear out."

"You can't," interrupted Charles. "You can't go home, and you're not fit to go anywhere. You're all in. The best thing you can do is to stay here."

"But if Lutman's coming here . . ."

"There's a room upstairs," said Charles. "There's a bed of sorts. I sometimes sleep there when I'm late at the office. It's a bit rough and ready, but you can get some rest, and I shall want you here in the morning. We shall have to get hold of your mother and break the news to her, and you'd better be here. I'll show you, shall I?" He led the way up the winding staircase and into the room. "It's not much of a place," he began.

"There's a thing that looks something like a bed, Charles," smiled the girl, "and in 10 seconds I shall be asleep. Good night, Charles."

"Listen, Jacqueline," said Stuckey, "shall you be nervous if I go out for a bit? I want to see Allwright. His boat is berthed close by and I shan't be gone for more than half an hour. I'll lock the office door and you'll be perfectly safe."

"Righto, Charles."

"I'll give a knock on the door to let you know when I'm back."

She nodded. "But I probably shan't hear you."

Accordingly, Charles, when he returned from his visit to Captain Allwright, tiptoed up the stairs and gave the softest tap on Jacqueline's door—a tap so soft that it could not have wakened even the lightest sleeper. Yet instantly came her voice.

"That you, Charles?" "All O. K., Jacqueline?" "Quite, thanks. Open the door, please, Charles; it isn't locked."

Charles opened the door and stood in the doorway.

"Yes, Jacqueline?"

"There's something I want to ask you."

"Well?"

"There was a pause. Then: 'You did know, Charles, didn't you? About Lutman's pretty little plot, I mean.'"

Charles was suddenly very grateful for the darkness.

"Yes, Jacqueline, I knew all about it."

"And you were in it, too?"

"Yes."

"Just how far, Charles?"

"Right up to my neck."

Again there was a silence before the girl asked:

"Why?"

Paint Protects Door Sills
When the grain of the wood in door sills is directly exposed, some dirt is bound to permanently lodge in it. A little varnish or paint or wax applied as soon as the finish shows signs of wear will preserve it and protect the wood.

Varnish Keeps Screens From Streaking
Before putting the screens up for the summer they should be given a coat of clear varnish, screen enamel, or paint. This will keep them from making unsightly streaks on the exterior walls of the house when it rains. Paint also is a protection against rust forming on iron screens. This precaution need not be taken with copper screening.

STYLE WHIMSIES
Mannish shirts are being developed in such feminine fabrics as net, allover lace, large floral prints and triple sheers, for wear with the youthful tailored suits.

"Poppy" is one of the new hoisery shades. It is a bright apricot shade, and is a vivid accent with white and summer pastels, also a daring contrast worn with gray.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

The distinction of being a ham and a splendid actor at the same time goes to "Wafford," an important player in "Waikiki Wedding," the comedy with Bing Crosby, Bob Burns, Martha Raye and Shirley Ross which is currently playing at the Cliftona Theatre. "Wafford" is—you guessed it—a pig. He's Bob Burns' pet and the affection between the two is the bane of Miss Raye's existence because she loves Burns too.

AT THE CIRCLE

The longest movie kiss on record since silent pictures smacked its way through 5400 frames of celluloid film when "Boy" Spencer Tracy met "Girl" Jean Harlow. It was a scene for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Labeled Lady" now at the Circle Theatre, in which Jean Harlow is married off to William Powell by her fiancé Spencer Tracy, against her wishes.

DENNY SLUGS ROUND TRIP

Athletic Club to Tangle With Commercial Point

Leonard Buskirk became the outstanding pitcher in the Tri-County Recreation league, Monday evening, when he let the Kingston A. C. team down with a single hit to win for the Container Corporation, 8-1.

The Container Corporation scored three runs in the first inning, added one in the fourth and four in the fifth to win the fray. Minner was the Kingston hurler.

The lineup included: C. C. of A., Watson, sf; Trimmer, lb; Denny, 3b; Hutchinson, 2b; Strawboard, c; Whaley, ss; Holland, cf; Butler, lf; Brungs, rf; Buskirk, p; Kingston, C. Delong, lf; Kreider, 3b; K. DeLong, cf; Large, 2b; Wright, c; Wilson, lb; Sims, ss; Buckwalter, rf; Minner, p; Triplett, sf.

Final standing of the head-pin tournament was: Frank Marion, 117; L. Vining, 116, and A. McGran, 115, the latter two scores being legged Saturday night.

A new tournament is under way on the Athletic Club alleys. It is termed a blind bowling contest. Each participant pays 75 cents for three games, 30 cents going into the pot. Three game totals count and bowlers may appear as often as they wish. The alley management is starting the purse with $5.

HOOSIERS TAKE SECOND STRAIGHT FROM BREWERS

BY UNITED PRESS
The Indianapolis Indians — the cellar spot American association club — walked away with its second victory over the top-spot Milwaukee Brewers yesterday.

In a 14-inning game, the Indians put a man on base in the final inning, then walked him across home plate to win 3 to 2. Winegarner passed three successive men to give away the game.

Toledo edged to within two points of second place with a 5 to 1 win over Minneapolis, now occupying that position. The Columbus Red Birds split a series with St. Paul by a 9 to 6 win.

THE HOTTEST American league pennant race in years swung into its second month today with only four games separating the league-leading Philadelphia Athletics from the last-place Washington Senators.

The National league finds the Pittsburgh Pirates out in front by a 3½ game margin and labeled as "the team to beat." With a 10-day home stand against the weaker eastern clubs ahead of them, the Pirates are likely to entrench themselves deeper in first place.

The second interseasonal series of the season opened today with the western clubs in the American league playing in the East and the eastern clubs in the National league playing in the West for the next 10 days. In the first interseasonal games the strength in the National league swung to the West and the power in the American league to the East.

Looking down the American league standing we find the Boston Red Sox in fifth place but only two games back of the A's. Two days results could send the Red Sox into a tie for the lead. The Yanks, who at this time last year were in front never to be headed, trail the Athletics by half a game after tossing away their 1-day lead.

LOS ANGELES, May 18—(UP)—All interested parties conceded today that Bob Nestell and Bob Pastor of New York will box the 10-round main event of an outdoor program at Wrigley field, and that they will do it May 28 instead of May 24 as scheduled originally.

Agreement to the delay was reached after the loudest and longest state athletic commission hearing held in this city, and after Gus Wilson and James J. Johnston, Jr., the managers, backed down from original statements that if each did not get his way the bout was off.

REDS NEARING CELLAR AFTER 2-5 LOSS TO CUBS

CINCINNATI, May 18—(UP)—The Cincinnati Reds were in imminent danger today of falling back into the National league cellar as they prepared to open a two game series with the Boston Bees. Cincinnati lost the final contest of a series here yesterday to the Chicago Cubs by a 5 to 2 count. The defeat dropped the Reds into a tie for seventh place with the idle Bees.

YESTERDAY'S HERO—Linus Frey, subbing at shortstop for the Chicago Cubs, who drove out a double and triple, stole a base, scored one run and drove in three others in his team's 5-2 win over the Reds.

About This And That In Many Sports

By BILL BRAUCHER

Southpaws Stand Out

NEW YORK, May 18.—It is unfortunate that Carl Hubbell's great pitching record of 21 straight games must be qualified in the record books by the winter of rest between his sixteenth and seventeenth consecutive victories . . . but it is no misfortune for the boys are writing about the streak as though Hub has set a new world record . . . the Giants are pretty sure to catch King Carl's competitive fire . . . a ball club with a pitcher who is hot is a hard club to beat whether the ace is pitching or not . . . a pitching streak gives a team a lot of confidence and momentum.

The Giants of 1912 got so tough in the period when Rube Marquard was rolling up his record that they might have won with McGraw himself on the mound . . . Smoky Joe Wood, now baseball coach at Yale, was pitching 16 straight for the Red Sox that year, too, and the Boston club went on beating the other teams whether Joe was in there or not . . . they had acquired the winning habit . . .

Ranks with Grove

Six years ago the same thing happened in the American league, when Lefty Grove suddenly became invulnerable and fire-balled his way through 16 straight victories . . . the Athletics were unstoppable . . . every player on the club believed he was helping Grove to win . . . and went on helping other pitchers to win through faith in himself . . . ball players are that way, you know themselves on the back by mentioning their pride in the fact that they played on the A's when Lefty was enjoying that streak . . . as though they had played dramatic parts in the play themselves . . .

Schupp's Feet Greatest

To get back to southpaws again, the boys have to drag out the name of Ferdie Schupp when they want to speak of effectiveness . . . back in 1916 Schupp was so good that figuratively the enemy didn't get a run off him in 30 games . . . he got into 30 games that year, and allowed the opponents of the Giants 90 earned runs per game . . . Left handers have left some marks for control, too . . . 30 years ago "Doc" White of the White Sox didn't walk a man for 65 consecutive innings . . . but when I think of control, the picture of Herb Pennock in his last few years with the Yankees comes to mind . . . his fast one gone forever, he depended upon aim and knowledge of batters . . . I think Pennock was one of the smoothest, most graceful performers the game has known . . .

INDIANS BEGIN EASTERN TOUR; HARDER TO PITCH

BOSTON, Mass., May 18—(UP)—An eastern tour which may decide the ultimate fate of the Cleveland Indians in the American league pennant chase was to be opened by the club here today. Manager Steve O'Neill nominated his veteran ace, Mel Harder, to work the opening game of the series against the Boston Red Sox. Fritz Asternmueller was to oppose him.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

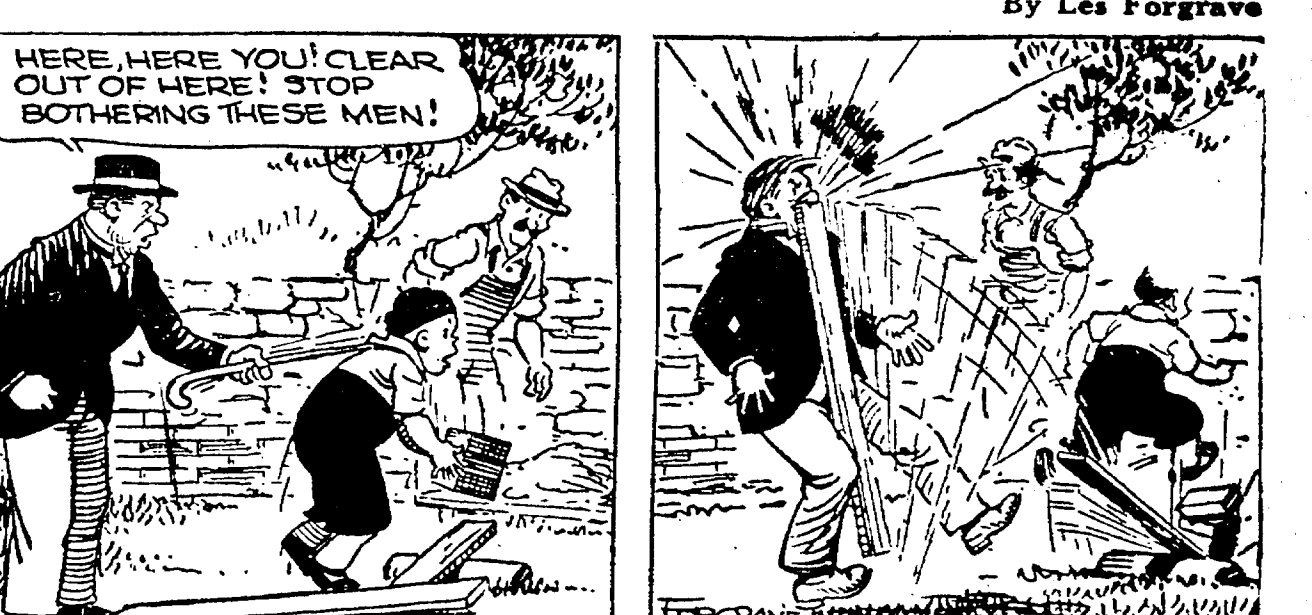

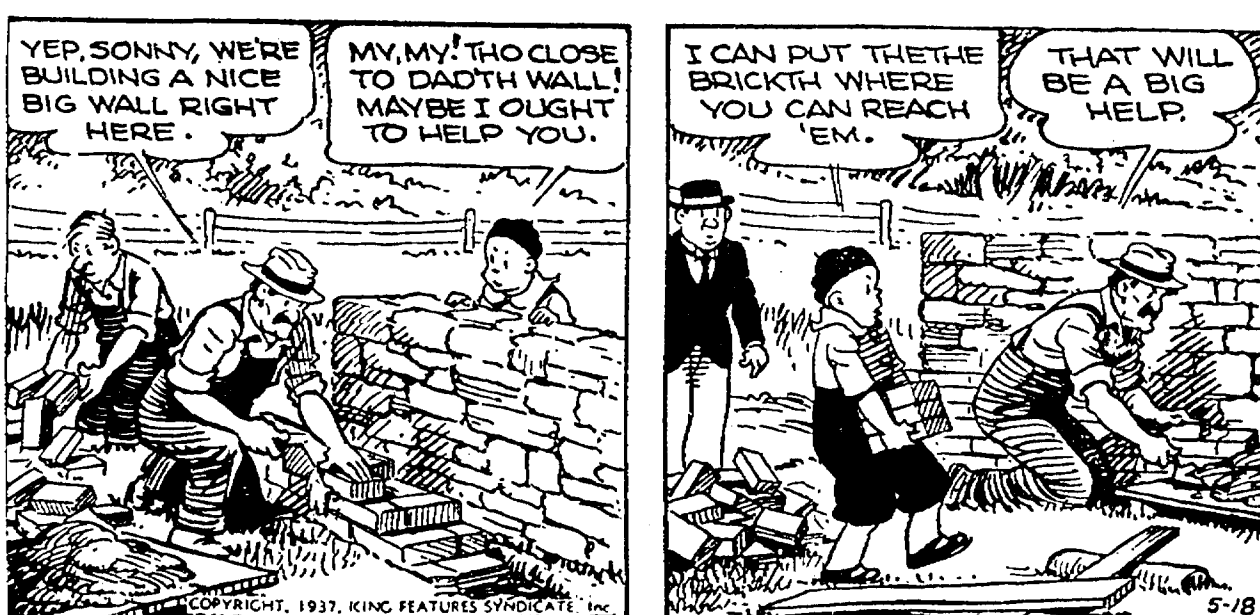

FORESIGHT TO THE EXTREME
MOST PLAYERS would consider a 7-card suit headed by the 3 top honors as certain to set up. A fine bridge player, however, should not even take a thing like that for granted, but should make a safety play, if possible, to guard himself against its not breaking properly. Foresight in such matters can pay big rewards.

- West led the club Ace, and, seeing the K in dummy, switched to the diamond 5. The declarer saw a chance for 6-odd by proper play. Deciding that the diamond was undoubtedly a fourth-best instead of from a short suit, he realized that the suit would not break, so he made two safety plays. His first was to trump the diamond 5.

Cash down payments on farms financed through the Federal Land Banks have been the largest so far this year of any similar period since the beginning of the depression.

Lack of organic matter in soils is the biggest handicap faced by Ohio commercial gardeners. J. H. Boyd, Ohio State University, recommends green manure crops to correct the condition.

In the years 1926-1935, whooping cough caused the death of 2,888 Ohio children less than five years old. This was 356 more deaths than were caused in the same age group by both diphtheria and scarlet fever in those years.

An average acre of Ohio farm land is said to be worth 75 percent as much now as in 1912-14. The Washington bureau of agricultural economics says this compares with 71 percent in 1936 percent in 1933.

A drying plant which is to be used to preserve grass without leaving it in the sun to cure has been erected near Lawrence, Kansas. Operators of the plant buy cuttings of oats, wheat, barley, rye, and Sudan grass. Cutting is done when the plants are young enough so they will produce new growth.

BRIEF MESSAGE SENT TO F. D. BY NEW DEAL FOE

of the supreme court and older than any other justice except the veteran liberal, Louis Brandeis, has long been expected to retire. It was believed he had continued in his supreme court post for some time longer than he had personally desired of the constant series of important issues placed before the court for decision by constitutional tests of New Deal enactments.

Only Justice James Clark McReynolds has voted against the constitutionality of more New Deal measures than Van Devanter. Of 27 vital New Deal Tests, Van Devanter has joined his conservative colleagues, Justices George Sutherland, Pierce Butler and McReynolds in condemning 13 Roosevelt enactments.

Wrote No Decisions
Despite his leading part in court opposition to administration legislation, Van Devanter has never written a majority or minority opinion on a New Deal question.

This was attributed to the fact of his age and frail health. Court colleagues, desirous to enable him to continue on the bench, relieved him so far as possible of routine duties.

Like all supreme court justices, Van Devanter has lived a quiet and reclusive-like existence. Especially has this been true since the death of his wife in 1934. His associates said he planned to leave the court at that time but was persuaded to continue temporarily.

A native of Wyoming, Van Devanter all his life was fond of the out-door life. In recent years he had purchased a farm near the small, old Maryland town of Elliott City and there he had passed much of his time. His friends believed that he purchased the farm with a view to retiring there and anticipated that he would spend much of his time in the quiet rural retreat now that his decision to quit the court has finally been made.

Friends of the white-haired justice said that he had been contemplating retirement for the last two or three years and had definitely made up his mind to do so when congress adopted the law providing for retirement on full pay.

Van Devanter felt, however, that he should not relinquish his duties in the supreme tribunal until the present term of court was completed.

To Continue Service
He expects—if called on—to receive assignments and to perform his duties on one of the circuit benches, working intermittently at the direction of the chief justice and hopes thus to continue of service to his country for many years to come.

Van Devanter will continue to live at his apartment house home in Washington and on his farm in Howard county, Md. He will spend most of this summer on the farm and then will go to the Seignior club in Canada.

Britain Has 200 "Outlaws"
LONDON (UP) — Nearly 200 persons in the British Isles are outlaws and, according to law, may be shot on sight. They are descendants of the Clan MacDonnell, famous in the 1715 and 1745 Stuart rebellions. Now an effort is being made to have the law repealed.

CONFESSION BRINGS FIVE-YEAR DECREE

WIDOW TO FACE DEATH CHARGES

the story, but detectives recorded it with more than casual interest. They had just listened to Mrs. Tiernan's confession that she loved Christie so much she had agreed to sacrifice her children to make room for him in her small apartment.

"I held Helen while George hit her," Mrs. Tiernan told police. "Then I cut her throat."

Police believed it unlikely that Mrs. Tiernan would ever pay the extreme penalty for her unnatural deed. They revealed that her mother was a psychopathic case for the last 15 years of her life. George Smith, 60, her father and an unemployed machinist, said the mother died eight years ago in the state hospital for the insane at Central Islip, N. Y.

Man's Part Denied
Christie, swarthy and handsome, admitted that he had told Mrs. Tiernan he might marry her if the children were out of the way, but he steadfastly denied that he had had any part in the killing.

Little Helen, who had won the love of the neighbors in the tenement district where her mother has a $20-a-month two-room apartment, died from burns rather than from wounds inflicted by a carving knife, a pair of scissors and a hatchet, medical examiners believed.

Jimmy, left for dead in the thorny underbrush a few yards from a main highway, suffered concussion of the brain. But he sat up in a hospital bed, and his confused, baby mind poured out the story that sent detectives after his mother.

"Mommy took Helen and me on the train," he babbled. "When we got off the train George and another man were there in a shiny blue car. George is my other papa."

Gently, detectives questioned the boy.

"Then what, Jimmy?"
"Mommy took us along the road and into some woods."

"Did Mommy hit you?"
"Mommy hit sister."

"Did George hurt you?"
"George bought us ice cream. Then he hurt us."

Mrs. Tiernan at first declared that a "strange man" had attacked her and had run off into the woods with the children. He had come on them, she said, while they were enjoying a picnic. Then she was told what Jimmy had said.

"It's true," she said, calmly. "Everything Jimmy says is true. Almost everything, anyhow. I had to get rid of the two of them. They were in the way."

DUKE AND WALLY TO WED JUNE 3 IN CANDE CASTLE

No Member of Royal British Family to Attend Ceremony For Former King

the family. Edward's brothers and his mother wanted the Duke of Kent and perhaps Mary, the princess royal, to attend and show the world the family has not cast off the abdicated monarch.

The government said "no." The cabinet "advised" the royal family that it does not care to show royal approval of the former monarch to the twice-divorced American woman.

The limited wedding party may include only Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers, who were Mrs. Warfield's hosts at Cannes
